Yes you should be held accountable for your friends actions. It's your account, you're 100% responsible for whatever happens on that account. If anything against the rules happens on that account, the account will be punished and you're responsible for it. But I don't know who you actually are, because you either aren't actually banned, or 1coollevi isn't your Minecraft username

I typed /rules just to make sure it was on there but it didn't say anything against griefing so I did it anyways. It was my first infraction so if you decide to give me a second chance a promise it won't happen again. And my minecraft username is 1coollevi

There is a big rules board at spawn, and also a thread here with a more in-depth set of rules. You should probably look more into things

So, it wasn't your friends? So... you lied?

Usually a liar can be caught before a single legged.

I invited Haydenterry to the minecraft server and chifilly got him banned because he found diamond. I am Pissed off. Chiffily accused him of Xraying, He never x rays we both agree it ruins the game for everyone else to do something like that.

I love how you spell my name 2 different ways in the same sentence. But, I didn't ban him "because he found diamonds" I banned him because he X-Rayed to diamonds, and it was blatantly obvious, so don't just say "he just happened to find them". Nobody gets banned for no reason. And next time, if you want to make a "ban appeal" don't post a stupid message in someone else's topic, and instead get the actual person to come and talk for themselves in a new topic in
