

holy mother of god...

Posted by eskimo - 10 Jul 2009 13:35

It has been released on the Enemydown website that all of the ed admins are to leave the ED css admin team, this from what i have gathered is down to where the TWNA group want to take the league. The Admins are going to stay with it until all of the css summer cups are out of the way. The future of the admin team has not been stated but myself personally think they will make a new league, one of which that is not dictated by a upper powers. I know many of the ed teams want to follow the admins if this occurs.

forums.enemydown.co.uk/showthread.php?t=103324"

onclick=">window.open(this.href);return false;

myself personally have heard that ED's sponsorship have decided to cut the inflow of money leading the the admins to pay for the site, servers etc... and this they feel is not possible. Therefore i think they will try make a new league somewhere else but make it relatively small scale and get a sponsor that will not dictate them.

Looks liek esl are going to dictate the amatuer css competitive gaming community now.

=====